Kornit Digital 3 Day L.A. Event Presents: 'Kornit Fashion Week'

Coming soon to Downtown Los Angeles: November 2nd to November 5th

The first USA collaborative effort premiered on Sept. 8 at New York Fashion Week. KORNIT, the digital-printing manufacturer, worked with designer threeASFOUR to present their new collection "Kundalini" to demonstrate its on-demand production capabilities.

The Israel-based manufacturer of high-end digital textile printers collaborated with fashion designers to show off its sustainable, on-demand fashion production technology.

The designers worked closely with KORNIT to produce garments quickly and with less waste, while remaining true to their artistic vision. KORNIT technology allowed the designers to shrink design cycles to days – or even hours – a significant time savings compared to traditional fashion production.

"Fashion production can be cleaner and more sustainable, while also being efficient and more responsive to inspiration and creativity,” said Ronen Samuel, CEO of KORNIT. “We are writing the operating system for on-demand, sustainable fashion”, he said.

KORNIT also hosted a Tel Aviv fashion week event, presenting the works of 40 of Israel’s most prominent fashion designers. The manufacturer is creating partnerships in New York, Los Angeles, London and other global fashion hubs.

KORNIT unites those who have a vision for more sustainable and meaningful fashion, and KORNIT Digital technologies have been designed from the ground up to help achieve those goals.
